

Getting involved

Daisy is an open-source project with a very liberal license. This means a lot more than just giving the source code away for free, and you as a user sitting back and anxiously awaiting the next release. We welcome your participation, being it questions, comments, remarks, bug reports, documentation enhancements or feature requests.

Getting involved starts with subscribing to the Daisy mailing list<sup>1</sup>, making you part of the Daisy community. You have direct access to the evolving codebase, both through a web interface<sup>2</sup> or through SVN. Do not hesitate to send in patches! Regular contributors will be granted commit access to the Daisy codebase, giving them the ability to help growing Daisy in the direction they want.

Another way of getting involved is through funding the development of additional features of Daisy. While we support and enhance Daisy on a continuous basis, being paid for developing Daisy surely tweaks priorities.

Mailing lists

Daisy does not have separate user and developer mailing lists, everyone is welcome on the same list.
